Transportation is vital: It connects people to jobs, healthcare, the grocery store and more. For people who aren’t able to drive, can’t afford to drive or do not want to drive, however, getting from point A to point B can be expensive, burdensome - even impossible.

As state leaders debate the future of transportation funding in Wisconsin, let's make sure to focus on what really matters, from pothole and bridge repair to investment in public transit that connects people to jobs and services.

This fall, people across Wisconsin are coming together to explore the impacts of the transportation system on communities in our state. Each event will look a little different, but all will include:

- Stories about the experience of local transit riders;
- A presentation about how our decision-makers' transportation policy choices impact the lives of Wisconsinites across the state;
- Roundtable discussions about what can be done locally, and
- A discussion about how we can all work together to create a transportation system that works for everyone.
